

KNOW ALLS

Anonymous

There is a saying that those who know it all irritate those that do.

Let me introduce you to Harry.

He hates Christianity. The Bible is rubbish and all lies. He is vicious in his verbal attacks on the Bible.

As a result, he has embraced spiritualism including communicating with the dead, aliens who created human life and travel to us in UFOs, reincarnation etc. He also believes that all the Royal family are evil and probably devil worshippers as may be most politicians. He believes in illuminati, rich people who govern all the worlds affairs. Harry will not read newspapers or watch the television. He is homosexual and insists that is how he was born. It is a genetic thing. Even now he loves male company. He has been married and has two children.

There is no evidence that people are born gay whereas there is evidence to disprove this. A woman may have two sons of the same pregnancy and later one turns out to be homosexual and the other heterosexual yet there are both of the same genetic material. There are heterosexuals who are content being that way, then, often much later in life, change to be gay.

One another issue, Harry is into astrology and has made his own astrological chart.

It is probably worth noting that most spiritualists and homosexuals are atheists when it comes to the Bible.

When things are put to Harry to show that he may be wrong, he will not accept it and argue. When irrefutable evidence proving he is wrong is sent to him, he will not read it. He is always right and that is all that matters. If he likes or approves of something, it is good and anyone who disagrees is wrong.

He talks about all the books and articles on the internet that he has read to support his views and says that they cannot all be wrong. Yet when he is confronted with all the books and writings supporting Christianity over 2000 years they are all rubbish.

He has had a male lodger for over 20 years who is lazy and inconsiderate..He has no income or capital and Harry pays his bills and debts even for unnecessary things like X box consoles and video games. He says he cannot take action against him or turn him out for he would worry about him.

He has a male neighbour who has a sick wife and difficult child and they need constant care and yet this neighbour spends a lot of time with Harry whereas he should probably attend to his family's needs more carefully, This neighbour seems to be the apple of Harry's eye. He is also addicted to video games and uses Harry's computer at times to play them. He helps himself to food and drink at Harry's without permission and is a parasite and Harry allows it.

Harry is eccentric, that is to say he is unconventional and has strange beliefs and unusual behaviour and is abnormal. These are salient facts. His attitude is both dismissive and proud. To be dismissive is to be indifferent having no regard for the views of others and to be proud is to be full of self worth and self importance, immodest, arrogant, vainglorious, boastful and egotistical. It displays putting inferiority on others.

One of the many disturbing things about Harry is that if you do not share his love of something, like a piece of music, he is incensed. He complains about Picasso being total rubbish and if you say you like some of his work you are dismissed as an idiot.
